Transitional Alcohol & Other Drugs Support

The Transitional Alcohol and Other Drugs (AOD) Project provides drug and alcohol support to people on remand.

Who we are

If you are on remand and have used alcohol and / or drugs inside or outside, we will try to support you. We prioritise people who have a connection to Western Sydney because of our funding. We visit people on remand inside prison.

What we do

We offer counselling to help people deal with problems with drugs and / or alcohol. You could be using at the moment and want to cut down or stop, or you might have already stopped and want help to stay away from using and / or drinking.

We offer support with getting connected to other services that might be able to help you. This can be with things like getting into residential rehab or getting a case worker to help you when you get out.

How we work

The Transitional AOD Project is a confidential service. This means that what you talk about with your AOD worker stays between you and the worker, unless you agree for information to be shared. Your AOD worker will talk with you more about this.

If you are currently in prison and want to know more about the project, please talk to a SAPO, Psychologist, Chaplain or Education Staff. They can contact CRC on your behalf.

To make a referral, please call us on (02) 9288 8700 or visit our website to request an AOD Transition Program Referral Form.
